McFaul's Chat and Chew: Blending Hard and Soft Skills

Middle school is a time; whereby, we start to blend the hard skills with the soft skills and by this we mean that we diversify our focus from just the daily routine of core academic concepts and skills like paragraph writing, pre-algebra and understanding scientific method to include the soft skills of how we weave these into our daily learning. The soft skills on the other hand, are subjective skills that are much harder to quantify. Also known as "people skills" or "interpersonal skills," soft skills relate to the way you relate to and interact with other people. Examples of soft skills include: Teamwork, Communication, Flexibility, Patience, Time management, Motivation. Are you able to work effectively in a team? That's the skill employers most want when they are recruiting new college grads. That skill of working in a team starts in early education and becomes omnipresent in middle school as students work through their projects learning the soft skills of:

- Ability to work in a team - Acting as a team player means not only being cooperative, but also displaying strong leadership skills when necessary
- Ability to make decisions and solve problems - Problem-solving skills and resourcefulness are critical when unexpected issues inevitably arise
- Ability to plan, organize and prioritize work - Flexibility is a valuable asset - employees who can adapt to any situation are dependable no matter what's thrown at them. Accepting feedback and applying lessons learned fosters professional growth
- Ability to communicate verbally with people inside and outside an organization - Effective communication is paramount, and includes articulating oneself well, being a good listener and using appropriate body language
- Ability to obtain and creatively process information - Creative thinking is invaluable and drives innovation and increased efficiency

Universities and Companies seek candidates with both types of skills when hiring for most positions. That's because if you can't get along with others, don't have a positive attitude, can't work well as part of a team, and aren't able to think creatively and critically it may not matter how talented you are.

Through our work with being a Rights Respecting School and with exploring the 5 Key Competencies of Social Emotional Learning we believe that we are travelling in the correct direction in order to strengthen our students in the challenge of blending their hard skills with their soft skills. We have created opportunities for conversations in our Advisory Class Meetings and in our Community Circles to enhance the development of key character traits that are identified by top recruiters from across North America in both academic and business worlds. These traits include: attentive, collaborative, courteous, dependable, empathetic, flexible, honest, motivated, perseverance, and respect. In our classes we present many opportunities for students to rise to the occasion in showing their abilities and traits in many of these and associated other areas of people and relationship skills. We breakdown the social nuances of facial expressions, body language and voice intonations and we review and role play successful and unsuccessful ways in which these interactions create results. We strive to be more explicit in our examples and to review the myriad of choices that each individual can present when faced with new academic and relationship challenges. The goals being to help them better their ability to read the social cues and context of every situation and know how to problem solve. To use their level headedness and resiliency when assessing a situation, and reassessing it if you fail the first time and to use their analytical skills, creativity and logical thinking to reach a solution. To use the IDEAL Model of Identifying the issue, Defining the obstacles, Examining your options, Acting on an agreed course of action and Looking at how it turns out, and whether any changes need to be made. All in an attempt to help broaden our student's soft skills when learning their hard skills of reading for meaning, analyzing graphs and interpreting data in various media forms.

Culture Beat: Events and Activities.

Academic Support – We have available on Thursdays through our Aboriginal Education Department in District # 43 a after school homework session, whereby students can drop in and have a quiet place, have computer access with adult support to do their individual work. Students need to report to our Youth Worker Mrs. Davis and bring their materials to get down to the task.

Code Red Lockdown Review – We held our Code Red Drill last Thursday with the help of our three friendly RCMP Liaison officers who checked through our procedures and at times met with some students who needed some review as to their best performances during the practice drill. We learned many good things about how best for all of our classes to be prepared for future type drills and possible emergencies. We will be working on providing blackout Velcro drop cloth curtains for our classroom door windows, along with securing our office area from obvious sight lines to reviewing the expectations of all students and their NONE use of cell phones during emergency situations. We were acknowledged for our students overall serious response to the drill, to the quiet nature of many of the classrooms and for the quick response in securing all classroom doors and entry/exit points located throughout the building. Our hope is to never have to employ the structures and strategies that were practiced last week; moreover, our students were responsible, purposeful in their actions and respectful of their own needs and those of their peers.

Team Skye Fundraising

On behalf of Team Skye, we would like to thank everyone for their support of our fundraising initiatives. With your help we were able to raise $885.00 towards our trip to Camp Zajac.

THANK YOU!

Gr. 7's and Parents Ministry Satisfaction Surveys - Each year, the Ministry of Education asks that all grade seven students complete a satisfaction survey. There is also an opportunity for parents to take the time necessary to complete the online satisfaction survey. While we have plenty of time to complete these surveys (the deadline is April 30th), we will be sending information home to parents by the end of this week (with individualized passwords – required in order to take part). Completion of this survey is voluntary for parents. The survey can be completed electronically and can be accessed on the Internet at http://www.bced.gov.bc.ca/sat\_survey.
